Erratic winds hamper battles against Gem fires

By The Associated Press

Weather became a key factor Tuesday in the pitched battles being fought against wildfires in Idaho's Panhandle National Forest to the Wyoming border as fire bosses mounted new assaults in the face of dwindling manpower and equipment.

"We're getting erratic winds," Nez Perce National Forest spokeswoman Mary Zabinski said. "You start making progress and the wind shifts again."

Over 2,500 firefighters were assigned to the most threatening of 17 major fires burning on over 70,000 of the state's forest lands, and Gov. Cecil Andrus' declaration of a statewide fire emergency freed the National Guard to assist crews strung across the state.

Individual forests also have been authorized to begin hiring firefighting recruits locally to ease any manpower shortages.

Over $3 million in resources, mostly commercial timber, has already been lost to flames in western and northern Idaho, and fire managers said suppression costs will run into the millions of dollars.

No structures have been lost, but a flock of sheep was killed by one blaze in eastern Idaho while another in a northern part of the state destroyed a log loader.

Swirling, gusting winds caused major problems on blazes in the western and northern regions of the state, while severe winds failed to materialize along the Wyoming border to help crews check the raging 5,000-acre Trail Creek fire in the Caribou National Forest.

"We're still not out of the woods," said spokesman Dan Pugmire. "But we didn't think we could hold the fire if those winds came up. Now we think we have a chance."

Winds fanned flames over control lines on two flanks of the Trail Creek fire near Palisades Reservoir late Monday, but crews managed to corral them and a successful backburn on the eastern flank improved protection for ranches within less than two miles of the fire.

A 2,000-acre backburn on the southwest flank of the 7,500-acre Eagle Bar fire near Hells Canyon on the Oregon border stopped the fire's advance in that direction. But Payette National Forest spokeswoman Jeanne Felmy said flames continued burning out of control on the eastern flank in two timber sales totalling 26 million board feet in the Deep Creek drainage.

'Buzz' Langdon dies from cancer

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — L.L. "Buzz" Langdon, 53, whose community involvement encompassed both economic development leadership and playing Rumpelstiltskin in children's theater, died at his home Tuesday night of cancer.

People coming by the house to visit in the last few days were a bit taken aback by the way Langdon and his family were handling his illness — with humor.

But the Langdons have spent their entire lives in levity. The final days of Buzz Langdon, the notorious joker, were no mean feat for long faces or public tears.

He learned in early June he had pancreatic cancer. At the doctor's, when he first learned he would have to begin having blood transfusions, he sat up, although he was in great pain, pulled his lips back from his teeth and said in Hollywood vampire fashion, "Blood! I must have blood!"

"We've just been able to laugh about things that are breaking our hearts," close friend Jean Hovey said.

Born July 12, 1935, in Twin Falls, Langdon graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1953. He attended the University of Missouri for 2 years before transferring to the University of Utah, where he graduated in 1956.

He married Sue Leonardson on Feb. 25, 1956, in Twin Falls.

"They were so close," said Hovey. "The kind of couple you would always think of together."

Notorious for jokes

Langdon was known to introduce Sue not as his wife, but as his "real good friend."

"Buzz and Sue are not only husband and wife, they are best friends," lifelong friend Bob Latham said. "And that is a real rare combination."

The nickname "Buzz" had been with him from birth. His older sister immediately started calling him "Little Baby Buzzard."

The Buzz part stuck. He was employed at KMYT television station for 18 years, then worked for the Northside News in Jerome as the assistant publisher for 11 years.

He served as the executive director of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce for the past 18 months.

"The man certainly loved his work," said Lee Wagner, former

No-show jurors lead bailiff on quest for bodies; trial starts after delay

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl noticed something terribly, terribly wrong in his courtroom Tuesday morning.

Some people were missing from his trial. Like 14 jurors.

Nobody knows why 14 of 35 jurors decided Tuesday to do something else. This particular group may have assumed the trial would be cancelled — again.

"They've called in, had trials scheduled and had them cancelled two or three times," said Linda Wright, the county's jury commissioner. The last trial the group was called for was Tuesday's, one day before the panel's term ended.

But this trial was ready to proceed. Deputy Prosecutor Rockne Lammers had his witnesses lined up for an aggravated assault case against Ronald Billodeaux, 30.

Billodeaux is charged with shooting Howard Martin, 55, in the left hip in February. The shooting occurred at the Pioneer Trailer Park.

Meehl, who thought he would see 35 bright, shining juror faces — not 21 — would not have had enough to proceed if both attorneys had exercised all 12 challenges they are allowed. So he sent Wright to do battle with the delinquent jurors.

She started a series of frantic phone calls and six more jurors came in, but not before Meehl took decisive judicial action, in case all designated jurors couldn't be found.

He sent court security officer Wayne Tinsley to the Job Service on a mid-morning body raid. Tinsley convinced Assistant Manager Larry Drexler to cooperate.

"Their attorney said fine, but treat it like a job referral," Tinsley said. He returned by 10:30 a.m. with two warm bodies from the lobby.

If Drexler didn't cooperate, Tinsley said he was ready to nab somebody.

"There were five warm bodies out there," Tinsley joked, referring to a group standing outside the Job Service's office on 240 Fourth Ave. N., a block from the courthouse parking lot.

"Anybody out here interested in doing jury duty?" asked Placement Supervisor Mary Joe Cahill, while lobbying job seekers in the office's lobby.

"I went down there to get a job at the employment office," said 60-year-old Solomon Hudson. Hudson had recently been laid off a farm job.

He went to Meehl's courtroom, and added a little more flavor to the day when he showed up for the afternoon session 20 minutes late.

Meehl said he picked the employment office because he figured its clients wouldn't be as inconvenienced as others on the street, who may have had work plans for that day.

Solomon Hudson was recruited for jury duty from the Job Service offices Tuesday

"I figured they might be inconvenienced by immediately serving on a jury," Meehl said.

"I wanted to cause as little inconvenience as possible."

Besides that, jurors get paid $10 a day. Meehl came up with 30 potential jurors in mid-morning.

The jurors took their places in the court's gallery, the courtroom darkened — and a bailiff turned on a video machine with an introduction to jury service video.

"Why me?" were the first words on the screen.

That may be have been Meehl's thoughts. This is the first time it's happened since I've been a judge," Meehl said.

Meanwhile, Wright prepared letters for the no-show poten-

Death toll from crash at air show rises to 49

The Associated Press

RAMSTEIN, West Germany

The death toll in the worst crash at an air show rose to 49 Tuesday, and officials feared some children hospitalized with severe burns had been orphaned because no one had inquired about them.

The Pentagon said six Americans were among those killed when three Italian jets collided Sunday at the U.S. Air Base in Ramstein, hurtling into the crowd in flames.

West German officials said two people died of burns Tuesday, raising their death toll to 49. They said it had been identified, including the three Italian pilots. None of the 14 was a U.S. citizen.

Chief Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard said the latest U.S. count put the number of confirmed fatalities at 40, including six Americans, four Germans, three Italians and 27 people of unknown nationality. Of the six Americans, two were active-duty military personnel, three were dependents and one is unknown.

Bennett calls for more math, science for pupils in grade school

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Education Secretary William J. Bennett proposed a model curriculum for the nation's elementary schools Tuesday, urging that even the youngest students be exposed to the classics of children's literature and a rigorous study of mathematics, science, social studies and the arts.

Bennett's proposal gives heavy emphasis in the early years to reading and writing, using children's literature that ranges from "The Three Billy Goats Gruff" to the plays of William Shakespeare.

Social studies should offer students "continuing and cumulative instruction in history, geography and civics," Bennett said. Mathematics classes should focus more on story problems, science instruction should move beyond fundamentals into more complex ideas and foreign-language instruction should begin no later than the fourth grade, he said.

Sex education should be taught according to community standards and with parental approval, he said.

About one-fourth to one-third of U.S. elementary schools offer a course of study similar to the curriculum he outlined, Bennett said.

In what he said would be his final report before he is to leave office Sept. 20, Bennett contended that schoolchildren have an insufficient grasp of basic subjects, largely because of unsatisfactory instruction.

He sharply criticized the way students are taught reading and literature, saying the typical reading textbook used nationwide is boring and diluted.

Social studies, he said, is taught based on an outdated notion that "follows no logical disciplinary or chronological progression" and focuses on everyday life while slighting history and geography.

In math instruction, students typically are asked to repeat routine computations rather than solve more interesting, challenging problems. Science instruction is without scientific method and art and music lessons are often undisciplined "appeals to feelings and emotions," he said.

"We have heard the excuses for failure and inaction, and we reject them," Bennett said.

Forest Service turns to employment offices to beef up fire crews

By The Associated Press

A California brush fire destroyed at least five homes while crews fighting forest fires gained ground Tuesday in Yellowstone National Park and the Forest Service went to employment offices in the West in search of more firefighters.

National Guardsmen in Idaho were sent to the firelines, and Wyoming

Guard volunteers were sent for fire training. Firefighters were at work against fires charring woodland in Wyoming, California, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Utah. And dozens of fires have been allowed to smolder for months in the vast interior of Alaska.

Across the Bay from San Francisco in the grass-and brush-covered Orinda hills, a fire burned out of control for two hours Tuesday afternoon in an exclusive section of Orinda.

Five houses were "totaled" and two others had an undetermined amount of damage from flames still burning late Tuesday after the blaze was largely contained, Fire Chief Ed Lucas said.

Another remote California town mopped up after lightning-sparked blazes swept within feet of the community and forced evacuation of the town hospital for several hours.

Nationally, 18,000 firefighters were on the job in one of the nation's worst fire years, reported the Boise Infraparty Fire Center, a central office in Idaho that coordinates the fighting of forest fires in the West.

To date, 3.4 million acres of forest has burned, slightly ahead of last year's pace, but 2.1 million of that total is in Alaska, where 30 fires smoldered Tuesday, the center reported. The fire center told Forest Service regions affected by the fires that temporary firefighters may be hired on a contingency basis, for about $7 an hour, said information officer Mike Ferris. Ferris said each national forest must determine its requirements. "We're not saying we're going to hire 4,000 or 8,000," he said. Applicants lined up at state employ-

It's still filling itself in the Deep Creek drainage," she said. "It has consumed a good part of both timber stands. There's going to be a lot of loss in that area."

"We are facing the problem that when it crosses Deep Creek, where do we stop it?" said Dan Hormachea, logistics officer for the forest. "It's difficult to find any place to tie it."

Hormachea said hordes of bees continued to plague the crews as two firefighters were "medevaced" by helicopter for numerous stings.

Crews continued to standby near a score of summer homes on Pistol Creek and a forest service compound and airstrip on Indian Creek of the Middle Fork of the Main Salmon River as the 17,000-acre Battle Axe fire continued creeping through the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness in the Challis National Forest.

A wilderness trail along the Middle Fork of the Salmon from Pistol Creek to Thomas Creek was closed Tuesday for public safety, Challis Forest spokesman Jim James said.

And another crew was positioned on the western side of the Church Wilderness in the Payette National Forest to ensure protection for the Root Ranch from the 7,800-acre Silver fire.

Statewide faced major challenges in the Nez Perce-National Forest north of the main Salmon River, where over 700 firefighters were battling seven major fires in the Church and Selway-Bitterroot wildernesses.

Fifteen "helishot" helicopter-borne Bureau of Land Management firefighters nearly were trapped when one of the fires in the Moose Creek Ranger District took off, but they backburned an effective buffer line before they were airlifted from the area, Ms. Zabinski said.

Reinforcements were called in to the Clearwater National Forest east of Lewiston after the Opus 7 fire blew across control lines and spread to 750 acres in an active timber sale, destroying a log loader and burning down a president of the chamber. "When he took over we were at kind of a low point. We needed somebody to take control and give guidance and direction and Buzz dove into that with both feet and a number of things happened quickly."

The chamber's current focus on economic development has been due in large part to Langdon, said Jack Miller, current chamber president.

"He brought us a long way," he said. "He wanted so much to see a lot of the projects seen to their completion."

One of Langdon's last trips out of his house was to the Snake River Canyon to make sure everything was going all right with construction of the tourism center there. Two days later, the sponsors of the center, came to Langdon's home to dedicate the structure to him.

"Buzz's real vision for the Magic Valley was getting it in place. And he wanted a convention center in Twin Falls," said Vince Alberdi, who worked with him on economic development projects. "You always knew where he stood on the issues. He always let everybody talk and he'd listen, and then when he gave his opinion, you knew not only where he stood, but what direction we ought to be going with a project."

He devoted himself to church activities and numerous service, education and business booster organizations. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Twin Falls and was a Paul Harris Fellow of the Twin Falls Rotary Club. He served on the board of directors for the Jerome Country Club and coached Little League baseball for eight years. He was devoted to community theater. He held offices in Magic Valley Little Theater. He was a member of the Dilatantes and was active in the Children's Theater.

"He was an utter joy to work with, kind of frustrating though because he always learned his lines so fast," said Art Frantz, who played opposite him in "The Sunshine Boys."

"Children loved him," said Beth Sturgill, who directed Langdon in numerous plays, including the title role in "Rumpelstiltskin."

At the end of that play, when the young queen tells Rumpelstiltskin his name, Sturgill said Langdon would give the children in the audience an evil look and start shouting at them, blaming them for revealing his name. The kids would rise in spontaneous unison, cheering and clapping because he made them believe they had helped keep mean old Rumpel from getting the queen's baby.

"He had those children so geared up, he had them in the palm of his hand," Sturgill said. "That is the ultimate of what children's theater should be."

Langdon also played the evil magician in "Aladdin and the Magic Lamp," the play that won the Twin Falls Community Children's Theater an award for outstanding children's theater of the year for 1985.

"Everything he did was perfection-plus," she said. "He would take every character apart and play them to the hilt."

He served on the board of Salvation Army, United Way, YFCA and Boy Scouts.

He is survived by his wife, Sue; one daughter, Holly Capps of Twin Falls; two sons, Barry Langdon, of Ogden, Utah, and Ensign, of Phoenix, Arizona; his mother, Marion Langdon of New Plymouth; three brothers, Lynn Langdon of Buhl, Archie Langdon of Twin Falls, and Danny Langdon of Star; and four sisters, Dorothy Peterson of Salmon, Lucille Townley of Chagrin Falls, Bertine Paynter of New Plymouth, and Lorraine Hisey of Arlington, Va.; and one granddaughter. He was preceded in death by his father.

Memorial service will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at the First Baptist Church.

The family suggests memorial contributions to First Baptist Church and the South Central Anglican Cursillo Community.

Buzz is a rarity in today's world because he is a gentleman in the true sense of the word," Wagner said a few days before Langdon's death.

Hovey remarked about Langdon's zest for life, "If he could officiate at his own funeral he would."

Gas can fumes force landing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Northwest Airlines flight en route from Seattle to Detroit made an emergency landing here Tuesday after fumes from a West German tourist's empty gasoline can filled the cabin, authorities said.

Cal Clegg, FBI special agent for Utah, said there was not an incident on board, but the flight was diverted to Salt Lake City Tuesday afternoon after the crew smelled gasoline fumes in the cabin.

"Without knowing the full details, they decided to divert the plane to Salt Lake," Clegg said. He said a West German tourist, whose name and hometown were not available, was interviewed and authorities determined it was an innocent mistake.

Clegg said the tourist, who was "traveling alone, had rented a car earlier and ran out of gas."

tial jurors.

A person summoned for jury service who fails to appear or to complete jury service as directed shall be ordered by the court to appear forthwith, the letter says. "I will need a written excuse for missing your jury duty today."

People who fail to appear for jury service can be fined $1,000 and thrown in jail for three days.

Twelve of the jury-built jury panel were selected and the trial moved on late in the afternoon. The trial is expected to conclude today, Lammers said.

Today's weather

Sun shining through the smoke

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Coalinga: Sunny and smoky today and Thursday and fair at night. Highs will be in the mid 80s today and from 85 to 90 Thursday. Lows tonight from 45 to 55.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley: Sunny today and Thursday and fair at night. Some area of smoke. Highs will be in the low to mid 80s. Lows will be in the 30s.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah: Generally fair but with a few afternoon clouds through Thursday. Lows mostly in the 50s with highs from the mid 80s to near 90.

Nevada: Isolated afternoon and evening undercasts over the central portion through Thursday. Fair skies tonight. Continued hot with highs in the upper 80s and 90s. Lows in the mid 40s to mid 50s.

Summary: The National Weather Service in Boise says a weak, dry low pressure system will remain over Idaho through Wednesday.

The cold front associated with this low pressure system brought cooler air to all sections of the state except the southeast.

A ridge of high pressure will build into Idaho at the end of the week, bringing warming temperatures. Skies were clear across the state except for a few high clouds in places. Most of the smoke that had been reducing visibilities over most of the state during the past few days cleared out, thanks to the cold front that moved through Idaho.

Afternoon temperatures were down 3 to 10 degrees from Monday afternoon.

Temperatures were in the lower 70s in the north, 80s in the central and 90s in the south.

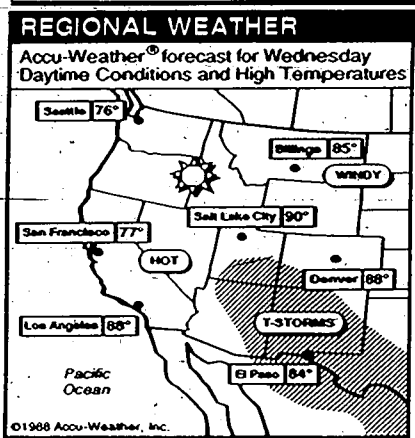

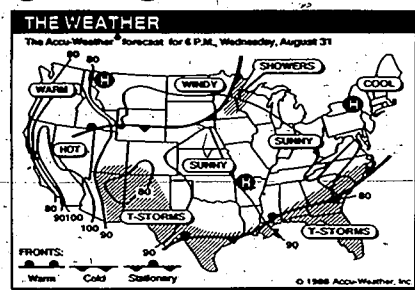

At 3 p.m., temperatures ranged from 72 at Grangeville to 91 at Mountain Home.

Winds were generally in the 10 to 20 mph range in southern Idaho, except Sun Valley where winds in the 15 to 25 mph range were reported. Elsewhere, winds were generally light.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 96 degrees at Emmet. Deadwood reported the coldest at 29 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Tuesday was 107 particles per cubic meter of air.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho calls for fair and warm Friday through Sunday. Highs will be in the 90s. Lows will be in the mid 40s through the 50s.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 109 degrees at Fresno, Calif. The lowest was 32 degrees at Jackson, Wyo.

Andrus wants campaign to get at issues

BOISE (AP) — Expressing what may be the feeling of more and more American voters, Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus says it is time for the 1988 presidential contenders to get down to issues.

"I hope that the presidential campaign is redirected toward the issues rather than toward some of the sideshow we have been seeing," the Democratic chief executive told the Postal Business Council in Boise on Tuesday.

Andrus expressed dissatisfaction with the recent focus on Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle's military record, Vice President George Bush's emphasis on the pledge of allegiance and rumors that Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis' wife burned an American flag.

He said it was paramount that the next administration — Democrat or Republican — rein in the budget deficit and stabilize the international trade situation.

"We need a debate on where the nation is going as we approach the 1990s," Andrus said. "I'm not sure we need a debate about playing flag burnings, the pledge of allegiance or whether service in the National Guard is honorable."

But while Andrus said the presidential race was important, he maintained the outcome of this fall's state legislative elections will have a critical impact on Idaho's future because of the decisions that must be made on state support for education.

"The strength of our economy is ultimately tied to the quality of our educational system," the governor said, citing the fact that the Republican-dominated Legislature, trying to avoid a major election-year state tax increase, rejected his plan for higher support for schools.

A state tax hike may have been avoided, but supplemental property tax increases to support schools hit a record $34 million as 52 districts obtained additional financial backing from local property owners.

Claiming Idahoans dislike the property tax most of all, Andrus blamed the GOP legislative majority for the unprecedented increase — a charge Republican leaders reject on grounds that more state aid would not have eliminated the need for most of those tax hikes.

"Education funding should not be a partisan issue," he said. "I urge you to familiarize yourself with the record of our representatives. I am not under the illusion that only Democrats are going to be elected to the state Legislature. My only hope is that we elect people, from both parties, who appreciate the fact that Idaho is on the brink of a new era of growth and greatness."

Jury selection begins for 4 accused of bombings

BOISE (AP) — Jury selection went slowly Tuesday in the opening day of trial for four Coeur d'Alene residents, accused of bombings, robbery and other crimes to further their white supremacist beliefs.

With a panel of 130 prospective jurors on hand, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan began the task of picking what he said would be "a fair and unbiased jury, without prejudice."

The session adjourned late Tuesday after Ryan went through detailed questioning of 22 of the first 40 prospective jurors seated. Jury selection resumes Wednesday morning.

Two prospective jurors asked to be excused Tuesday afternoon because the defendants have links to the white supremacist Aryan Nations organization.

When asked if he could be an impartial juror in the case,

Richard Suyehira said he could not, "due to the organization to which the defendants belong," and another juror gave the same answer.

Over the next several months a jury of 12 people and three alternates is to hear U.S. Justice Department charges against Edward and Olive Hawley and David Deborah Dorr. The government charges them with a series of bombings and other crimes in the Coeur d'Alene area in the fall of 1985.

The federal government alleges the crimes were part of a conspiracy to raise money for their plan to overthrow the government.

Ryan told the prospective jurors to prepare for a long trial. The prosecution plans to take about 10 weeks to present its case, which will include 150 witnesses and several hundred items of evidence.

U.S. Forest Service puts out call for temporary firefighters

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service is putting out a want ad of sorts for temporary firefighters to battle the blazes scorching the West's timberlands.

But the emergency help must endure backbreaking labor, smoke and flame. And only local people need apply.

The Boise Interagency Fire Center has notified Forest Service regions affected by the dozens of fires burning out of control that a shortage of manpower exists and temporary firefighters may be hired on a contingency basis, said Mike Ferris, BIFC fire information officer.

The Boise-based center coordinates fire suppression in the Western states.

The temporary "emergency firefighting hires," or "casuals," must have the physical and mental capacity to work on the fire lines, including long days of shoveling and chopping on steep hillsides very near burning timber, Ferris said.

"The job carries with it a lot of drama and romance," Ferris said. "But sometimes you've got to ask yourself, 'Why am I doing this?'"

"What we're doing is only hiring from the local community," he said. "I've had people calling from all over the country, and some wanting to volunteer. I've had people wanting to take their vacation and work, if you can believe that."

Ferris said those interested should contact their local national forest office, not the Boise Interagency and not the Forest Service in Washington, D.C.

Applicants will undergo an aerobic "step test" — which entails several minutes of stepping up and down on a wooden box and then measuring the ability of the heart to recover from the exertion.

Casual crews are undergoing training in Montana which should end Friday, BIFC officials said.

Plane crashes in Boise River

CALDWELL (AP) — The pilot of a small plane that crashed in the Boise River north of Caldwell has been transported to Boise's St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center with critical head injuries.

The Cessna apparently crashed into the river near the end of KCID Road at 6:06 p.m. Monday, a Canyon County dispatcher said. The pilot, Eldon Whiteley, was flown by Life Flight helicopter to the Boise hospital where he was being treated for head and facial injuries, a nursing supervisor said. The plane was taking off from Huber Field near Middleton when it apparently stalled, said Gary Hubler, whose father owns the airstrip.

"I heard the engine sputter and I ran outside to see what was going on," the younger Hubler said.

Presidential campaign camps debate debates, decide nothing

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush's campaign said Tuesday the Republican nominee was willing to meet Michael Dukakis in two debates and hold a third between their running mates.

But the Dukakis campaign held out for at least one more debate.

A meeting between the top officials of both campaigns ended with disagreement over both the number and timing of debates between the presidential nominees.

There was no decision on who would sponsor the debates or on what the format would be, but both sides agreed to meet again Thursday for more negotiations.

"We want more debates; they want fewer," said Paul Brontas, campaign chairman for Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nominee.

"We want to start them earlier; they want to start them later," Brontas said. "We want to continue them up until the election takes place; they would like to end them much earlier."

James A. Baker III, chairman of the Republican nominee's campaign, said the Bush campaign has offered to hold two presidential debates and a third between the vice presidential nominees, with the first coming as early as Sept. 22.

That date would rule out, however, rival proposals for debates on Sept. 14, sponsored by the League of Women Voters and on Sept. 14, sponsored by a bipartisan commission set up by both parties to hold the debates.

"Provided that the issues of format and staging and so forth are resolved, the vice president has agreed to debate twice and we have agreed that there could be a vice presidential debate," Baker said.

Baker said the commission's proposed second debate on Sept. 25 "would be agreeable with us."

Both officials spoke after a two-hour private meeting in the Washington offices of Brontas' law firm. Brontas and campaign manager Susan Estrich represented Dukakis and Bush was represented by Baker, media adviser Roger Ailes and campaign aide Bob Goodwin.

Iran-Contra a Bush failure, Dukakis says

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis said Tuesday that George Bush flunked a key "test of leadership" in the Iran-Contra affair and questioned whether his Republican rival has the judgment needed to deal with the Soviet Union. Bush shot back that Dukakis favors "unilateral cuts" in U.S. defenses.

The two contenders for the White House swapped charges in their escalating war of campaign words as their top aides met in Washington without agreeing on a schedule for presidential debates this fall.

Bush campaign chairman James A. Baker III said Tuesday's debate would accept two presidential debates and one confrontation between vice presidential contenders, but nothing before Sept. 22. Dukakis aide Paul Brontas said he favored a more extensive schedule.

Dukakis harried through aides with Bush over debates as fresh reports surfaced of lingering tensions with Jesse Jackson, the Democratic nominee's most persistent rival during the primary campaign. One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Jackson met with top Dukakis aides last week and was angered when he was handed a list of states to avoid during the fall campaign — including several where he won primaries and caucuses earlier this year.

Dukakis, who has sharpened his rhetoric in the face of widespread published reports that he has lost the campaign of fensive, said Bush was a failure as a prime fighter and misguided on defense matters.

Referring to the Iran-Contra affair, dealings with Panama's indicted leader, Manuel Antonio Noriega, and Bush's support during the early 1980s for ousted Philippines President Ferdinand E. Marcos, Dukakis said, "And he's talking about judgment about negotiations, about taking risks. I would be very concerned about someone with that kind of judgment negotiating with the Soviet Union."

Bush kept up his own steady drumbeat of criticism as he campaigned in North Carolina. "We should not gamble America's future on another liberal governor coming out of nowhere," he said, likening Dukakis to Carter.

Bush also cautioned against complacency in dealing with the Soviet Union. "I'm glad there is change in the Soviet Union," he said. "But we'd better not let our guard down."

Bush said he was encouraged by recent "polling things" indicating a turn in his fortunes in recent weeks. "That's turned around now after our upbeat Republican convention."

Dukakis aides scheduled a briefing with reporters for Wednesday. They are expected to emphasize that despite a recent Republican trend in the polls, their campaign is on track with television commercials set to begin running within the next two weeks, an organization in place in most of the 50 states and an estimated $25 million raised for the fall campaign.

What's what

Men and women

Before a woman does something immoral, if ever, she may worry about it a great deal. But once her mind is made up, she justifies, and rarely feels guilty afterwards. A man, though, doesn't fret overmuch before the evil deed. But he tends to be remorseful afterwards, and it may take him quite awhile to justify. So contends a French writer named Joseph Joubert.

Son, if you think it appropriate, you might tell your Mom: The Spanish conquistadors were extremely dirty. The Spaniards won.

Military leaders around the world have learned they easily can draft 16-year-old boys into their armies if they promise the parents will be given cash in the event of those drafted's deaths.

GOING TO WAR

That tendency to go to war — is it learned or inherited? Long a matter of great debate, that. Some scholars think war is learned, because certain cultures don't make war. Others say that proves nothing, most cultures do make war. What do you say? Is human nature such that there'll always be war?

Q. Sunday baseball has been legal in New York since 1920. How long has Sunday boxing been legal there?
A. Only since 1979.

Q. Epaullets, those shoulderboards on old military uniforms, what are they for?
A. Just decoration now. Originally they were supposed to protect the soldier from sword cuts.

Researchers say they still don't know why a full moon only appears half as big when you look at it while standing on your head. Photographs by cameras turned upside down look normal. Some trick in the eye and the brain, evidently.

Weapon blows 13 days after Soviets watch test

YUCCA FLAT, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear weapons test was conducted at the Nevada Test Site on Tuesday, 13 days after Soviet scientists monitored a U.S. test at the same site in a historic breakthrough.

Two Soviet scientists still were on site at Tuesday's blast, but were not involved in monitoring the test. U.S. scientists currently are in the Soviet Union and will monitor a test there on Sept. 14.

Tuesday's test measured 4.9 on the Richter scale at the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

The test was conducted at 10 a.m. and produced a "very distinct rocking motion" in a control center 10 miles from ground zero, said Energy Department spokeswoman Barbara Yoerg.

The device was buried in a 1,600-foot shaft in Yucca Flat, 85 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The Energy Department said the shot had an explosive force of less than 150 kilotons, the limit under treaties signed in 1974 and 1976.

The test was the 10th announced shot this year and the 685th announced since testing began in Nevada in January of 1951.

The most recent previous test was Kearsarge, the historic shot that was monitored by Soviet scientists.

Tuesday's test was conducted by Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and was weapons related, Ms. Yoerg said.

Drought boosts raw product prices 2.1% during August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers got for raw products in August rose 2.1 percent from July, boosted in part by the momentum of this year's drought, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

Compared with a year earlier, August prices averaged 13 percent higher. The report also included revised figures showing that the index rose only 2.9 percent in July, compared with the preliminary reading of 3.6 percent announced a month ago.

"Since April, as drought cut into this year's harvest prospects, farm commodity prices overall have climbed 10.8 percent, according to the latest figures."

But there were signs that the upward spiral of some commodity prices were beginning to level off in August. The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said in its preliminary report that higher prices for cattle, apples, tomatoes and lettuce contributed most to the August increase.

While prices declined for cotton, corn, onions and soybeans.

In the earlier months, corn and soybeans helped lead the way for rising prices. However, by late July, widespread rains began to dampen further increases, although the 1988 drought has not been broken.

At the Chicago Board of Trade on Tuesday, grain and soybean futures closed sharply higher, but it was on the strength of new export business, not further crop losses because of drought, analysts said.

Based on Aug. 1 estimates, this year's corn harvest may drop 37 percent from 1987; wheat, 13 percent; and soybeans 23 percent.

"All feed grain and soybean prices declined from July, but rough (unmilled) rice and all wheat prices increased slightly," the report said.

Prices of some major commodities are based on mid-month averages and then are revised the following month when additional information is available.

Apple prices at the farm level, rose to 26.1 cents per pound in August from 19.7 cents in July and 16 cents a year ago.

Eastern stopped from firing 4,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday stopped Eastern Airlines from firing 4,000 employees, but allowed the financially strapped carrier to go ahead with cutting back service to 14 cities on Wednesday planned.

Eastern said it will go ahead with the cuts. Its hub in Kansas City will be eliminated and flights will be cut from 53 to 6, said spokeswoman Paul Musto.

"Massive layoffs are not and shall never be business as usual," U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker said in a 50-page opinion. "The Railway Labor Act requires Eastern to bargain with its unions before taking unilateral action to eliminate 12 percent of its workforce."

He signed a preliminary injunction that bars Eastern from "altering in any way the status quo working condition of Eastern's pilots, machinists and flight attendants."

A trial in the matter will be scheduled later.

Eastern President Phil Bakes called the decision "gravely wrong" and said he would file an appeal.

"Eastern, like any American business, must be allowed to prune money-losing operations," Bakes said in a statement. "We must be able to take prudent, although sometimes painful, measures in the best interests of the company and our employees."

Lawyers for the three unions that brought the court action against Eastern submitted financial statements and Parker ordered bonds of $25,000 each to indemnify the airline if the decision is reversed.

Meantime, the airline said, "Eastern's basic full schedule remains intact. Travel agents and passengers can continue to book flights with full confidence that the schedule will be as announced."

"This is a case of protecting work and protecting jobs," said James Linsey, an attorney for Air Line Pilots Association. "He said the decision 'doesn't second-guess the business decisions of Eastern Airlines to fly from Point A to Point B or to limit service in particular cities.'"

Asked what Eastern might do with thousands of employees it claims not to need, Linsey replied: "They get transferred, like any company transfers employees from one plant to another."

Bad math led to nuclear restart failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unreviewed calculation flawed four different ways led to the failed restart of a nuclear weapons production reactor, an Energy Department advisory panel was told Thursday.

But no one knows why the same reactor at the Savannah River Plant near Aiken, S.C., underwent a power surge a few days later, on Aug. 10, after a successful restart, the panel was told.

It was discovery of a flawed calculation decades ago that led the department earlier this year to order its remaining weapons reactors limited to half power. A runaway power surge with safety systems disconnected caused the 1986 Chernobyl reactor explosion in the Soviet Union.

Pilots told jokes before 1987 crash

DENVER (AP) — A "black box" tape recording of conversations in the cockpit of Continental Airlines Flight 1713 before it crashed, killing 28, shows the pilots joked about a flight attendant's dating habits, but failed to discuss the snow falling. The Denver Post reported Tuesday.

In a copyrighted story, The Post reported in the nearly three minutes of pilot conversation omitted from the National Transportation Safety Board transcript, discussion between the pilot and co-pilot centered on whether a woman flight attendant dated pilots.

The Post said there was no discussion during that time about de-icing or the snow falling at Stapleton Airport in the minutes before the Nov. 15, 1987 crash.

The Union of Flight Attendants, a labor group, has filed a statement with the NTSB, saying the undisclosed portion of tape shows the pilots were discussing "unnecessary and unprofessional topics."

However, Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said Monday the recording shows the pilots operated a "highly skilled, well-disciplined, professional cockpit."

The NTSB is investigating the possibility that the DC-9's wings were not adequately de-iced prior to takeoff. The board also is studying the experience of the pilots and turbulence from a plane landing on the next runway as possible causes of the crash.

Strike committee formed

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — State employees on Tuesday announced formation of a united front for anti-government protests, striking another blow at the embattled regime of President Maung Maung.

Striking employees from more than 120 government departments and state-owned corporations said the All Services General Strike Committee would begin demonstrations Thursday.

It was the fourth illegal association formed against the government in three days: Students formed a union Sunday, dock workers formed their own on Monday, and 21 elder statesmen announced formation of a Committee for Democracy Monday night.

A statement issued by the new committee said employees now "will unitedly stage demonstrations in Bandoon Park." The park, the largest in Rangoon, is near the U.S. Embassy.

Talks remain stalled as Iran rules out concessions

GENEVA (AP) — Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati said Tuesday that his country would make no concessions to Iraq as peace talks to end their 8-year-old war remained stalled for a fourth day.

"That is Iraq's dream ... but if they couldn't get any concessions during this long war with so many casualties, of course they will not be able to get any concessions or anything beyond their legal rights during the peace talks," Velayati told The Associated Press in an interview.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who is conducting the negotiations between Velayati and his Iraqi counterpart Tariq Aziz, said the talks were stalled over immediate troop withdrawal and freedom of navigation.

"We are trying to clear the first part of a U.N. peace resolution on an immediate cease-fire and a troop withdrawal without delay ...

Survivors speak of air show crash

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A burned and terrified German girl, not yet in her teens, asked of the American soldiers holding her, "Am I going to die? Am I going to die?" "I just can't get that face out of my mind," one of them said later.

A young injured said God helped him save injured people after the crash Sunday at the Ramstein air show. A woman told of the anguish she felt when her husband was assigned to retrieve the remains of victims.

The unofficial U.S. military newspaper Stars and Stripes published an account Tuesday of moving stories told at "grief clinic" that was closed to the general news media. It gave no names.

"One of the tech sergeants from my squadron was holding a 10-to 12-year-old German girl," a soldier said.

"She was burned, but I couldn't tell how bad."

"She just kept looking at me asking 'Am I going to die? Am I going to die?' And I couldn't tell her one way or the other, so I just kept looking at her and saying: 'You're all right. You'll be fine.'"

Chile's military nominates Pinochet

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The country's military commanders Tuesday nominated right-wing President Augusto Pinochet to rule until 1997 if voters approve his selection in an October referendum.

Pinochet, who commands the army and took part in the selection process, was widely expected to be nominated by his fellow members of the military junta.

Voters now will either ratify or reject Pinochet as the lone presidential candidate during the referendum, which the 72-year-old Pinochet has said will be held in October.

Riot police, meanwhile, used tear gas in skirmishes with protesters in Santiago and at least three other cities. Opposition supporters have been holding rallies to oppose the one-candidate presidential referendum process and the anticipated nomination of Pinochet.

Pinochet's nomination was announced at 5:27 p.m. by air force Gen. Enrique Montero.

"The army commander-in-chief, along with expressing his appreciation for the nomination, made clear his acceptance of it," Montero added.

Guerrillas, Morocco agree to cease-fire

GENEVA (AP) — Marxist-led guerrillas and Morocco agreed conditionally Tuesday to a plan for a U.N.-supervised cease-fire and a referendum on the future of the disputed Western Sahara.

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said both sides accepted the plan for ending the 13-year conflict over the phosphate-rich Western Sahara "with remarks and comments." He declined to elaborate.

The Polisario guerrillas have fought for Western Sahara's independence since 1975, when Spain's colonial forces gave up the northwest African territory and Morocco annexed it.

Algeria has backed Polisario's campaign, but Morocco and Algeria restored diplomatic relations in May after years of tension verging on war.

In Madrid, Spanish Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez told Spanish National Radio Spain that he viewed the announcement as "very good news."

"We expect this process to lead to the establishment of peace and prosperity in this region of great importance to Spain," the minister said.

Giuliani said Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar expects to begin a U.N. peacekeeping operation in the region before the end of the year. The U.N. is considering sending about 2,000 peacekeeping troops.

South Africa says troop pullout complete

RUNDU, South-West Africa (AP) — Fifty army vehicles rumbled across a pontoon bridge Tuesday carrying the last South African troops out of Angola, where they spent more than a year fighting in support of anti-Marxist guerrillas.

South Africa's army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Ian Gleeson, said at a ceremony that nearly 1,000 soldiers crossed into South-West Africa during the day to complete the first phase of a U.S.-mediated regional peace initiative.

"As of this moment, we are out of Angola," Gleeson said.

The peace effort is aimed at ending a 13-year-old war in Angola, whose Marxist government is backed by thousands of Cuban troops. After a Cuban withdrawal from Angola, South Africa says it will grant independence to South-West Africa, also known as Namibia.

An estimated 2,500 South African troops, some of them 180 miles inside in Angola, have been leaving in stages since a cease-fire was declared Aug. 8. They supported the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA.

UNITA, also backed by the United States, is not party to the cease-fire and was excluded from recent peace talks between Angola, Cuba, South Africa under U.S. mediation.

Corn line demands rhythm

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

BUHL — Everybody has a different style. You see, you have to build up a rhythm. Some of them really get into it. Their whole bodies shake, rocking with the rhythm of the rollers and the belts. The speed of the cutting machines sets the pace. But one woman, she looks like she's crocheting. She moves only her hands. She's great," said Maggie Molesworth, one of the "lead ladies" at the Green Giant corn plant. In her 22 years at Green Giant, Molesworth has seen every style. She works as supervisor, guardian and occasional mother confessor to the 125 men and women who work on her line turning fresh corn into the canned and frozen varieties. People are here to make money — fast.

They have little more than two months. And the more corn they pack, the more money they pocket. Speed counts, and individual productivity is rewarded. They began Aug. 4, and the race is on until the corn is gone, about the first week in October. The Green Giant is running two 11-hour shifts seven days a week. Molesworth gets a percentage of the bonus her line makes for exceeding daily production quotas, but she said whip cracking isn't necessary. Bonus money is motivation enough. The husked corn comes down a conveyor belt where COC team on the entire plant move the ears to rollers headed for a cob cutter, a machine that whacks off the ends. The ears proceed single-file to the freezing room, where each is united with three other perfect five-inch ears in one glorious frozen package.

The ears that don't take the frozen road continue past the workers known as cutters, who grab them and shove them into a machine that shaves the kernels off the cobs. Ears that pass the first cutter continue down the line to the second cutter, and so on until, by the end of the line, all the ears have been snapped up. The fastest cutters get the choice positions at the top of the line, where the corn volume is heaviest. It's a bit like king of the hill or first chair in an orchestra section. Each cutter below tries to cut more corn than the person above, in hopes of moving up the line to cut more corn and make more money. COC people can earn as much as $1.23 an hour more than their regular wage based on

Towel-cloaked thief makes off with cash

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A robber with a towel around his face ran away with three money bags after holding up two restaurant employees at rifle-point late Monday night. The robber hit Cherie Frisby, a manager at the Arctic Circle Restaurant, 1335 Filer Ave. E., in the head with the rifle butt, according to police reports. Frisby told police that the rifle discharged at that time. No one was seriously injured. Frisby, who was back at work Tuesday, and Sindy Holloway, 19, another employee, had closed the restaurant and were walking to their cars when the robber approached them around 10:20 p.m., said Tim Qualla, chief of the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety. The robber, on foot, came from across Filer Avenue and was carrying a bolt-action rifle.

The robber told Frisby three times to give him the three money bags she was holding, according to police reports. The third time, he jerked the money bags from her right hand and swung the rifle butt up, hitting her in the head. He then ran across Filer Avenue and out of sight, according to reports. No vehicle was seen. The amount of money stolen was not released Tuesday. Frisby, of Twin Falls, declined comment other than to say she was all right. No arrests had been made by Tuesday night. The robber was described as approximately 5-foot-11 and 140 pounds. He was wearing a green or gray jumpsuit with a hood and dirty white tennis shoes. The robber also had a light-colored towel around his face, held in place with a rope or cord.

Enrollment holds steady in Twin Falls

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School District is holding its own in enrollment, despite an economic year that could have been better. The number of students is "virtually the same" as last year, said Assistant Superintendent Keith Tolzin Tuesday. About 6,700 students have enrolled so far this year, with a few more students expected to drift in by the time the vacation season ends. "After Labor Day it will settle down," Tolzin said. Last year, right after Labor Day, the district had 6,725 students. That dropped to 6,662 by the end of the year. Since state funding is tied to enrollment, students mean dollars to the district. The state Department of Education pays districts based on attendance during the best 28 weeks of the school year, measured in "classroom units" of about 30 students each. The district received about half its budget from the state. This year's stable enrollment comes despite a drop in county population in recent years. According to a new Idaho Department of Health and Welfare report, Twin Falls County lost 300 residents from July 1985 to July 1986. The report puts the population at 55,800. The district also appears to have successfully weathered layoffs at Tupperware. The plant just north of Twin Falls has laid off most of its 700 workers over the past year, in preparation for closing the

Official withdraws hatchery objection

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fish farmers have pledged not to pollute Rock Creek, and in response a county official has withdrawn a protest that had been blocking their plans. "I will withdraw my objection as long as we can be assured the hatcheries would give us the quality of water we need," said Darrell Heider, Twin Falls County parks director. Joe Rand and Jack McCall, who have applied separately for water rights for three farms, agreed to abide by state and federal water-quality regulations at hearings by the Department of Water Resources Tuesday, and Heider withdrew his objections. The county had protested to the DWR in July when it learned Rand and McCall had applied for water rights. Heider said that with several fish farms already on the creek the county was concerned that overloading might occur, and the creek would become polluted. Mike McMasters of the Division of Environmental Quality, who also withdrew an objection to Rand's proposal, said when too much organic waste is added to a stream it loses its ability to cleanse itself. "I don't really anticipate any problem if they construct adequate facilities and then adequately operate and maintain them," McMasters said. Rand has applied for a water use permit to divert 15 cubic feet per second of water in Deadman's Gulch near Park Avenue. McCall has applied for water use permits for two fish farms about a mile away, using nine cubic feet per second. Bob Fleener, chief of the regional DWR office, said the permits will be granted on condition that Rand and McCall submit their operation plans to McMasters. • See FISH on Page B3

City rejects county building proposal

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A county proposal for a $7,000 maintenance shed across the street from the new jail was rejected by city officials Tuesday night. The rejection came after County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman declared a city requirement for sidewalks, gutters and landscaping to be "stupid." The city's planning and zoning commission also approved special-use permits for electronic signs at the Magic Valley Mall and Twin Falls High School. The county had sought a special-use permit to put up a 720-square-foot storage shed in the parking lot between Fifth Avenue North and Sixth Avenue North, directly behind the judicial building. LAM Orion, the city's community development director, said city ordinances require building curbs, gutters and sidewalks along Fifth because of the shed's size.

He recommended landscaping 10 percent of the property, but Hempleman said the expense involved in piping water a block for landscaping would be too great. "And I'm not going to carry a bucket out there," he said. He said the county's only other option is to build the shed near the courthouse — at a cost of $33,000. "It's your tax dollars," he said. County Commissioner Judy Felton said the property next to the proposed shed site is in a state of decay, and the shed would help hide it. Gary Bond, a zoning commission member, said the improvements would be required of any resident, and the city should not make exceptions for the county. Orton said the county can appeal the decision to the City Council. The mall won approval for its 73-square-foot electronic message center over the objection of

Jones, judge clash during arraignment

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "For the record, your honor, I'm appearing specially to clear this matter up," Aryan Nations member Wayne Jones said Tuesday. "Well, I'm appearing specially, too," answered 5th District Magistrate Judge Charles Brumback. So went the first appearance Wednesday for Jones on a variety of criminal charges. Twin Falls prosecutors say he's operated his glass business without a license, posted a sign saying he won't collect sales tax and then followed up on that promise. Jones calls himself a "preamble citizen" who isn't bound by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution. After rapid-fire exchange of comments with Brumback, Jones refused to answer Brumback's questions. "I stand mute before the court," he said. "We cannot proceed, this court hasn't proved its jurisdiction." He insisted on putting his proclamation on the court record. "Then speak into that little microphone," Brumback said. Brumback entered an innocent plea for Jones on two misdemeanor charges and ordered a preliminary hearing on five felony charges. "I didn't sign anything giving you jurisdiction to plead for me," Jones complained. "Court's in recess," Brumback answered. Jones, a heavy-set, balding man, rested his bent-up straw cowboy hat on the table in front of Brumback. At least five friends were in court with him. Jones is charged with two misdemeanors: operating without a business license and displaying a sign saying he won't collect sales tax. He is also charged with five felonies: alleged failure to collect sales tax on five specific retail sales. He operates Jones Glass at 636 Main Ave. N.

Hailey LID plan draws fierce criticism from property owners

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Cries of protest over the inequities of the creation of a city-wide local improvement district (LID) caused Hailey City Council members Monday to recess their options for upgrading city streets. A crowd of 200 people at the Wood River High School auditorium hammered questions at a panel of 11 people involved in the formation of the $3.5 million LID. Late in the hearing officials said they would reconsider the project, as proposed. "As we know, right now, the LID is not going to fly," Councilmember and Street Commissioner Risk Davis said. He said the Street Committee would meet and pare down the project by pulling out drains, curbs and gutters, pulling out the Tail Race Creek drainage system and finding a more equitable way to assess taxes. Mayor Paschal Drake said another public hearing will be set after the council considers a new proposal. Drake, presiding over the meeting, said the proposal for the LID was "strictly a proposal" and that the council had no intention of proceeding with the LID if residents were against it. Against it, they were.

Moyna Riggins who lives on a limited income on south Main Street, said she will have to pay $18,000 over the 10-year period, based on the property value of the five lots on which she lives. She also said she doesn't want to be responsible for maintaining the sidewalks in front of her house. Other residents, primarily from the Zone A district in the downtown area, which would bear the heaviest burden of the LID, said the assessments were excessive. Stan Bird, who has a 150-foot street frontage, has a much higher square footage, said he would have to pay $70,000. Martha Burk, who has 18,500 square feet on her residential property, said she would have to pay $10,875, not including interest. The way the LID was proposed, the cost of the downtown district was estimated at 0.58 cents per square foot. Of this amount, businesses and residents living in Zone A would pay 75 percent while the remainder of city residents would pay the other 25 percent. All assessments would be based on square feet rather than linear front footage or a derived benefits basis. "No matter what method you choose, you're going to have inequities," City Attorney Steve Crabtree said. Drake told the audience the proposal came from a committee that set out to devise a "Cadillac" solution for the street problems, partly because sections of city streets were beyond repair. Potholes filled during one summer, for example, have to be refilled the following year, he said. Also, other sections of town needed only crack sealing and chip and seal work, which the city, with a street repair budget of only $8,700 this coming year, cannot afford. Blaine County Commissioner Robert Gardner attended the meeting and said he thought the council did not hear what voters told them in 1985 when a $1.6

Democrats will choose commissioner candidate

TWIN FALLS — County Democrats will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday to choose a candidate for county commissioner.

Democrat Garry Nielsen withdrew his name from the ballot earlier this month.

"We'll find out who's interested, hear from them and then vote," said county Chairman Ken Pedersen. Anyone who would like to be considered as the Democratic candidate in District 3 should come to the meeting and be prepared to be interviewed, he said.

The Twin Falls County Democratic Central Committee and the party's other general election nominees in the county will then vote to select the commissioner candidate. That candidate will run against Republican incumbent James Fraley.

The meeting will be held at the county Democratic headquarters in the Campus Commons.

William Chisholm, a Democrat running for the state Senate, who said the sign would be an eyesore.

The commission was established to give the people a say in how their city is developed, but instead developers make all the decisions, he said.

Rox Lytle, who will build the sign, said the sign's placement will not interfere with traffic, and its pedestal will be landscaped.

The commission also gave the high school permission to put up a 23-square-foot message center to advertise school activities.

Andy Barron, high school athletic director, said the sign is vital in informing the community of special events. He said a lot of time is spent answering telephone calls from people wanting to know about school activities.

The commission limited the sign's operation to 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The City Council unanimously passed an ordinance earlier in the month easing city rules on electronic message centers. Tuesday night's approval of special-use permits for the two signs was the final step.

In other business, an application to operate a furniture refinishing and antique business in a house at 1225 10th Avenue East was defeated after several neighbors voiced their disapproval. The area is zoned residential.

"I can't see any reason that something like this should happen in the area," said Jim Higgins, who lives on 11th Avenue East. "I would say this is a residential area."

Leila Neilson, who applied for the permit, did not attend the hearing.

Enroll

plant for good.

The school district does not have figures broken down for each grade yet, but it appears that enrollment may be up slightly in the first, fourth and sixth grades.

Twin Falls has traditionally had greater numbers of students in the lower grades, Tolzin said. "The numbers tend to drop at the secondary level. I suppose it's the economy."

Although enrollment is steady

this year, there will still be some shuffling of students between classes and possibly between schools over the next few weeks to meet state accreditation guidelines for class sizes, Tolzin said.

Official reveals salary of aquaculture biologist

TWIN FALLS — Ernest Brannon, a University of Idaho aquaculture expert, who will assist Idaho's fish-farming industry in developing research proposals, will earn $65,728 annually, according to the state personnel commission.

The figure was confirmed Tuesday by Ernest Ables, head of the University of Idaho's Fish and Wildlife Department, who had refused last week to reveal the salary.

"I couldn't tell you if the last dollar amount is correct," Ables said. "You've got the basic salary."

Brannon will be in the Magic Valley Sept. 7 for conferences with the aquaculture industry. He will be based in the Teton Lab of Fish Nutrition in Hagerman. His aim is to turn the fish farming industry's research ideas into reality by refining them and finding appropriate researchers who can attract federal grant money to do the work, Ables said.

Brannon, formerly director of the University of Washington's freshwater aquaculture program, is a fisheries biologist with expertise in fish behavior.

Corn

how much corn they put through. Cutters can earn as much as $2.46 a hour more than base wage.

"That's a real incentive," Moleworth said. "It's really fair." She controls the flow of the corn belt down her line, making sure it doesn't go too fast or too slow. And she fills in on the line "when somebody has to go to the bathroom or gets a bellyache."

"What about the money?" "There is no money," Moleworth said. Making sure all her 125 people are happy and productive is plenty to think about.

A cardboard meter on the wall in the timekeeper's shack indicates the amount of fun being had. The range runs from "not very much" through "it's getting there" and "it's real close" on up to "LOTS."

A lot of romances grow up among the corn, Moleworth said. "Although, talking while working is forbidden for safety reasons (the giant is very big on safety), there are 20-minute breaks every 2 hours. Plenty of time to get to know somebody better, and plenty of time between breaks to think of what to say next."

A lot of local women work only the two odd months for Green Giant and use the money to buy something extra like a refrigerator or a trip to Mexico or new clothes for the kids.

Green Giant officials were surprised by a shortage of experienced workers this year. Of the 700 employees who help with "the pick," about 610 are usually returnees. But this year, the company came up 80 short on returning workers.

Green Giant's survey of the nonreturnees found 50 of the 80 had taken other employment.

There are more jobs competing for the same labor this year, said Darrel McRoberts, manager of the plant. The agricultural positions — harvesting, driving combines and trucks — were where the shortages were.

The plant runs 110 tons of corn every hour. Moleworth and her co-workers will have shelled 95 million ears of corn by the season's end. And, as they have year after year, many of them will come back next year.

"They really feel bad when they can't help anymore," McRoberts said. He ran into several women over 70 years old in Buhl recently who told him, "I should be up there helping you with the pick."

million bond for street repairs failed. He suggested simply fixing and maintaining roads if the city doesn't have the money to build new sidewalks, curbs, gutters and drain systems.

"Rather than a Cadillac, maybe you should consider a Ford," Gardner said.

V.K. Jeppesen, a Main Street resident, questioned why Main Street property owners have to pay the 0.58 cents assessment since the State Highway Department maintains the street, which is part of Highway 75. "Where's the fairness?" he asked.

His question remained unanswered, as did other questions throughout course of the two-hour meeting.

The audience was critical of the council, city planner and city engineer as they contradicted information given in a mailer sent to all city residents explaining the LID.

"I honestly believe this is the poorest informed bunch of people sitting up there running our government," Dale Nickelson said.

The mailer indicated the cost of the total project would be $3.5 million, while at the meeting the city street supervisor said $3.3 million would be an adequate amount.

The plan also calls for sidewalks to be built on the north and south ends of Main Street, but at the meeting, it appeared no sidewalks were included in the plan.

People also wondered why their residential property would be linked to the higher costs of improving the business district of town. Zone A includes some areas that are strictly residential, including many senior citizens on fixed incomes.

"We tried to make Zone A as large as we could to spread the burden out over the largest number of people," City Planner Emily Laven said when pressed for an answer.

Pete Trojan, who lives on Little India Lane on the west side of town, said his assessment would be $5,492. He said his home has no city sewer, no city water, no city streets and he has never seen a policeman patrol there. Trojan said when he asked the city what benefit he would receive from this expenditure, "They gave me a definite maybe, they might build a street," he said.

While many people at the meeting favored improving city streets, most opposed the means by which the council came up with this LID. Other residents said they liked the streets exactly the way they were.

Some residents proposed alternative means of raising funds for street improvements, such as a local option tax or gasoline sold at Friedman Memorial Airport, a city-wide local option tax, or asking Sun Valley and Ketchum to pitch in with footing the bill since Hailey residents take the brunt of increased air traffic from Sun Valley tourists.

Libertarians regain ballot status in Idaho, plan convention soon

BOISE (AP) — The Libertarian Party has regained ballot status in Idaho and will hold its state convention on Thursday to nominate legislative candidates.

The party on Tuesday turned in 11,463 verified signatures of registered voters, enough to qualify as a "new" political party under Idaho election laws.

That means the Libertarian Party presidential ticket, with Ron Paul running for president and Andrew Murrain as vice president, goes on the Idaho ballot in November.

Jack Dalton, Boise, state chairman, said the state convention also will nominate legislative candidates. At least three Libertarians are expected to run in Ada County and others in Canyon, Bannock and Jefferson counties, he said.

The party really isn't new. It was on the ballot in the past, including the 1984 election. The Libertarians didn't field candidates in 1986 and lost ballot status.

But the party staged a statewide signature drive producing enough valid names by Tuesday afternoon's deadline.

Achieving ballot status also means the Libertarians will receive a portion of the state income tax checkoffs.

The Libertarian Party never has received more than a scattering of votes in Idaho in the past, but Dalton said it looks encouraging this year. "The party will qualify for the ballot in all states except Indiana, North Carolina and West Virginia."

"We've been receiving a lot of support from disgruntled conservatives who don't like George Bush," he said.

He said other Libertarian leaders said the party received much support in eastern Idaho.

In all, more than 15,000 signatures were collected, with 11,463 verified. The minimum requirement was 8,223.

Dalton and Bob Waldrop, Utah Libertarian chairman and regional Ron Paul coordinator, said more than 2,200 signatures were collected in Bonneville County, usually a GOP stronghold.

About 3,000 were collected in Bannock, where traditionally the Democratic Party runs strongest; 2,100 in Ada County, 1,500 in Canyon and 1,200 in Twin Falls County.

Waldrop, Salt Lake City, said the Libertarian Party is receiving much support this election from members of the Mormon Church, who traditionally tend to be conservative Republicans.

He said the party will field 34 legislative candidates in Utah, and has hopes of winning a seat in District 25, the western part of Salt Lake City, where Republicans didn't field a candidate.

The state convention in Boise probably will adopt the national Libertarian Party platform.

"It's pretty simple," said Dalton. "We believe people should be allowed to do what they want as long as they don't harm others."

Murder charges are imminent in trial of polygamist Utah clan

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — State murder charges could be filed as early as Friday in connection with a polygamist group's Jan. 28 shootout with police, a state prosecutor said Tuesday.

Associate Deputy Attorney General Paul Warner said homicide charges will be filed within days after the scheduled sentencing Friday of four clan members convicted in federal court of a church bombing and related charges.

Clan leader Addam Swapp, his mother-in-law Vickie Singer, her son John Timothy Singer, and Swapp's brother, Jonathan, will be sentenced Friday by U.S. District Judge Bruce S. Jenkins for their roles in the Jan. 16 bombing of a Mormon chapel in Marion and subsequent 13-day police standoff.

Utah Corrections Lt. Fred House was fatally shot during the siege-ending gun battle, but murder charges have been delayed pending the outcome of the federal case.

Warner said charges against one or more of the defendants and paperwork transferring their custody to the state could be filed as early as Friday night, but most likely next Tuesday.

"My best guess is that we will effect the transfer over the weekend," Warner said. "We intend to charge very quickly when we get them."

There could be a delay of about two weeks if Jenkins decides to order the group to prison immediately on the federal charges. But Warner said state prosecutors don't anticipate such an order.

He declined to say what degree of murder the count would allege or how many of the convicted clan members would be charged. "But there is a distinct possibility that certainly more than one would be charged," he added.

A federal jury in May found Addam Swapp guilty of bombing the Kamas State Center, forcibly assaulting and resisting federal officers, attempted second-degree murder, possession of an unregistered bomb and two accompanying firearms charges.

Mrs. Singer was convicted of the same charges with the exception of the attempted murder and related weapons charges. Jonathan Swapp and John Timothy Singer were found guilty of the assault-resistance and attempted murder charges.

ters before construction and maintain the farms according to state and federal water-quality regulations.

McMasters said his office will also inspect the farms periodically to assure compliance.

Although fish deplete oxygen in the water, McMasters said the stream's natural motion replenishes the water's oxygen — but not if fish farms are too close together.

McMasters said waste from the fish farms can cause moss and algae to grow and creates sludge banks.

Aesthetically, the use of the park might be impacted by the additional moss growth, McMasters said. However, the two new farms are not big enough or close enough to the park or each other to be troublesome, he said.

Fish farms use settling ponds to reduce the amount of waste entering the river. Rick Eggleston, who will manage Rand's operation, has said when the settling ponds are properly managed, waste never overflows into the stream.

Eggleston said maintaining the treatment ponds is in the fish farmers' interest, because it aids healthy growth of the fish.

"If you neglect them, it shows up real fast," he said. The ponds will stink if waste solids are not cleaned out, he said.

Heider said Rock Creek Park is a popular fishing and swimming hole. The U.S. Department of Agriculture is completing a $3. million Rock Creek cleanup project that began in 1981, he said.

Deep South: Dixieball conquers all this year

By ED SHEARER
The Associated Press

The South is loaded again in 1988 — loaded with quality quarterbacks, running backs and outstanding teams.

Three of the teams could play a key role in the chase for college football's national championship, including Atlantic Coast Conference favorite

College football, '88

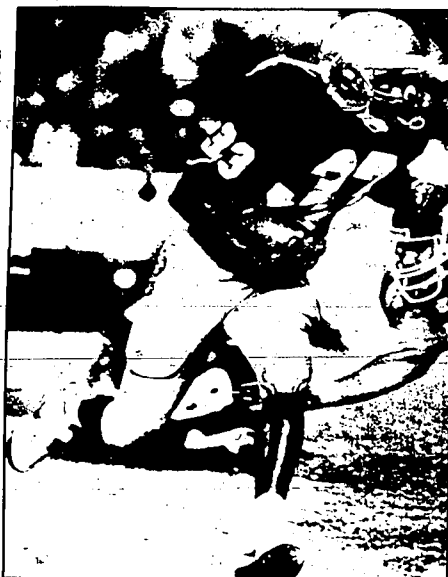

Clemson and two Florida independents coming off a 1-2 finish in last season's final poll, national champion Miami and Florida State.

The group of top quarterbacks includes a trio of dropback passers, Tom Hodson of Louisiana State, Steve Walsh of Miami and Jeff Francis of Tennessee; option stars Eric Jones of Vanderbilt and Terrence Jones of Tulane; and run-and-shoot ace Todd Ellis of South Carolina.

Alabama's Bobby Humphrey and a pair of Smiths — Sammie of FSU and Emmitt of Florida — head a deep cast of outstanding running backs.

Among the others to watch are Reggie Cobb of Tennessee, Harold Green of South Carolina and Harvey Williams, the LSU star coming off a season knee injury.

Georgia and Clemson are blessed with quality and depth among their running back corps. Georgia features sophomore Rodney Hampton and two Midwest: Who's best? Maize, Huskers, Sooners, Hawkeyes?

By SALLY JENKINS
The Washington Post

In the Big Ten, both Iowa and Michigan are preseason top picks in some polls, causing first-year Ohio State Coach John Cooper to remark, "Yeah, I've seen them and I can't sleep at night."

That's the way it is with football in the Midlands this year.

There is perhaps no team in the country that aches for a national championship more than Nebraska, which has been in the top 10 every season but one since 1971, yet hasn't won a title in that span. This could finally be the Cornhuskers' year, but first they must do two things: overcome the inferiority complex perpetuated by Oklahoma, and win the Big Eight. They also must stop doing things like attempting just 14 passes against Florida State, which beat them by 31-28 in the Fiesta Bowl.

For the Cornhuskers, there are just five starters back on offense, but one is quarterback Steve Taylor and another is fleet wide out Donna Brinson. The defensive interior had to be rebuilt; and while the Huskers can haul a few more corn-fed linemen out of their weight room, they will be young ones. Good linebacking helps, in the form of all-America Broderick Thomas.

"I think right now on paper this figure to be a good team," Coach Tom Osborne said.

As usual, Nebraska's fortunes are intertwined with Oklahoma, which it hasn't beaten in four years. There is no telling what will happen to the Sooners with Jamelle Hiewaiy questioning over former star linebacker Brian Bosworth's snitch-and-tell book, and an NCAA inquiry that may conclude this fall. But as Coach Barry Switzer says, "We're not going to disappear from the face of the earth."

There has also been much languishing in the Big Ten, where no team has won a national championship since Ohio State in 1956. So why should

Far West: Pac-10 reverts to status quo ante — UCLA vs. Southern Cal

The Associated Press

Rodney Peete vs. Troy Aikman, Southern Cal vs. UCLA.

The battle of Los Angeles could decide the Pacific-10 Conference football championship for the second straight season.

The two teams will battle for city supremacy Nov. 19 at the Rose Bowl, and one of them could return to Pasadena Jan. 2 to face the Big Ten champion.

Peete and Aikman, both seniors, are two of the best quarterbacks in the country.

In his first season at UCLA after transferring from Oklahoma, Aikman completed 159 of 243 passes for 2,354 yards and 16 touchdowns during the regular season to rank second in the nation in passing efficiency.

Peete was ranked fourth in the country after completing 173 of 291 passes for 2,460 yards and 19 touchdowns.

UCLA and Southern Cal tied for the Pac-10 title at 7-1, but it was Southern Cal that went to the Rose Bowl after upsetting the Bruins 17-

Michigan State beat the Trojans 20-17, the Pac-10's only loss in four bowls. Southern Cal finished 8-4.

Peete, who holds 12 school records, returns for his fourth season.

"He's the most versatile quarterback I've ever been around," second-year Southern Cal Coach Larry Smith said of Peete. "He can throw from the pocket, throw on the sprint-out, run the option. And he's so intelligent. It may be a cliché, but he's like having a coach on the field."

"I know if we get everybody back that we have on paper, we could be quite a bit better than last year," Smith said. "And that, quite frankly, is our goal."

UCLA, 10-2, beat Florida in the Aloha Bowl.

"His talent is phenomenal, and he has the kind of arm that comes along only once in a while," UCLA Coach Terry Donahue said of Aikman. "And the thing which is so impressive is that he's so much better now than he was when he came to UCLA."

"He has a total grasp of the offense now and is seasoned. He knows the checks to make, knows what to do when he's blitzed. The game experience has helped him tremendously."

UCLA returns only 10 starters, the fewest in the Pac-10. The Bruins also have a chance at setting a national record if they can win a seventh straight bowl game.

Peete and Aikman are two of nine starting quarterbacks returning in the Pac-10. Erik Wilhelm of Oregon State, Troy Taylor of California and Timm Rosenbach of Washington State also throw for more than 2,000 yards in 1987.

Washington lost starting quarterback Chris Chandler to the NFL Indianapolis Colts, but the Huskies think they have a strong replacement in junior Cary Conklin. Conklin had planned to redshirt last season, but had to play when Chandler got hurt.

The Huskies have been to nine consecutive bowls, including last year's Independence Bowl where they beat Tulane 24-12.

But the last three seasons have been disappointing for Coach Don James, as the Huskies went 7-5, 6-3-1.

East: Paterno's comeback — color it Orange

By The Associated Press

Syracuse University finished fourth in the national rankings last year with an 11-0 record and won the Lambert-Meadowlands Trophy, emblematic of Eastern supremacy. But that doesn't mean Coach Dick MacPherson considers his team the real Best of the East.

"I think, like everything else, there is a flag ship of the fleet, and it's up there in State College, Pa., Joe Paterno's team," MacPherson said, referring to Penn State, which won national championships in 1956 and 1957 and has been voted the top team in the East 14 times in the last 21 years.

"When I came to Syracuse (in 1981), there were two teams ... in the East. I thought there was Pitt and Penn State. Now there is one, Penn State, and the rest of us are struggling to try to get to Penn State's level."

"I think Pitt has slipped a little bit. I thought we caught them in recruiting this year. I think we are at one level. I think West Virginia, Pitt and Boston College are at another. The next level is Rutgers, Temple and Army-Navy."

"I think they are all very good, and I think the reason why they are all very good is because of the population base that we have. There are a lot of good football players."

Syracuse returns seven starters on offense, including both running backs and four of five interior linemen. The biggest loss was quarterback Don McPherson, the Heisman

Southwest: Beleaguered A&M team to beat

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M University's campaign for a fourth consecutive Southwest Conference football title won't begin until October. By then, the Aggies will either be decimated or going for a national title.

"Nobody can accuse us of dodging anybody," said Coach Jackie Sherrill, who can blame athletic director Sherrill for one of the nation's meanest preseason schedules.

The Aggies, who defeated Notre Dame 35-10 in the Cotton Bowl to finish 10th in the final Associated Press poll, lost to powerful Nebraska 23-14 last Saturday in the Kickoff Classic at East Rutherford, N.J.

Next Saturday, A&M visits the den of the Bengal Tiger at Louisiana State, one of the toughest places to play in the country.

The Aggies take a week off then host Alabama, another talented Southeast Conference foe.

Back on the road again, A&M travels to Stillwater, Okla., to play Oklahoma State on the next Saturday.

"My wife said by then she may not be sleeping with the athletic director," Sherrill said.

A&M launches its title defense on Oct. 1 against Texas Tech in Kyle Field. The Red Raiders were the only SWC team to beat the Aggies in 1987.

Texas, Arkansas, Baylor, Texas Christian, and Tech could give the Aggies a tussle. A&M must play SWC games on the road at Arkansas and Texas.

"We should be better on offense than we were last year," Sherrill said, "and just about as good on defense. John Roper leads probably the best corps of linebackers we've had here."

Sherrill added, "The schedule is the most difficult we've ever played."

Sherrill was asked why he did it to

NFL teams claim players from waivers

By The Associated Press

The week began inheriting the earth Tuesday as, typically, the NFL's lesser teams went about claiming Monday's cuts on waivers.

While many teams began reshuffling their rosters following Monday's mandatory reduction to 47, some of the players let go almost immediately found themselves with new addresses, in most of those cases, with a lesser team.

For example, the Atlanta Falcons, picked to repeat their last-place finish in the NFC West, immediately went after three players cut by other teams — quarterbacks Hugh Millen and Steve Dils of the Los Angeles Rams and running back Gene Lang of Denver.

Millen and Dils will replace the injured Scott Campbell behind

Pro football

Chris Miller, while Lang will help fill a hole created by a season-ending knee injury to Kenny Flowers. To make room for Dils, the Falcons waived second-year defensive end Mark Mraz.

"After our injury to Scott Campbell, we felt we needed some more NFL playing experience at the quarterback position. Steve can give us some depth," said Coach Marion Campbell.

That left the Los Angeles Rams, who had hoped to reactivate Dils, with quarterbacks Jim Everett and former Charger and Colt Mark Herrmann, who the Rams signed Tuesday.

The rebuilding New York Jets, meanwhile, picked up 12th-year linebacker Robin Cole, released by Pittsburgh. They also picked up defensive end, Ralph Jarvis, the Chicago Bears' third-round pick, in hopes of turning his raw talent into a dominant pass rusher.

Defending AFC East champion Indianapolis, meanwhile, acquired linebacker Anthony Griggs from Cleveland for an undisclosed third choice. They waived linebacker Orlando Lowry, a backup who has started just two of his 40 NFL games.

Other teams announced their cuts for the first time, including New England, which as expected placed quarterback Tony Eason on injured reserve.

The only name players released were veteran punter Mike Camarillo and nose tackle Rick Ruth, the long-time Oakland Trophy winner who spent most of his first two years on injured reserve. Camarillo lost his job to rookie Jeff Flegles.

Minnesota cut eight players, including two veteran backups, defensive end Stafford Mays and guard Randy Rasmussen. Denver, meanwhile, was reshuffling, putting offensive tackle David Studdard on injured reserve and bringing back linebacker Tim Lincecum, cut on Monday. That move makes Studdard eligible to play again after four games rather than six, which would have been the case had he been put on IR before the 47-man roster was set.

Washington did the same with four-time Pro Bowl offensive lineman Russ Grimm, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Aug. 5 and tight end Joe Caravello, both of whom went on injured reserve. They were replaced by H-back Terry Orr and wide receiver Anthony Allen, cut on Monday and one of the heroes of last year's strike team.

Anyone with information should contact the Twin Falls police or the pro shop at the golf course.

Taylor to meet with officials

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Suspended All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor will meet with NFL officials and could begin rehabilitation for substance abuse by the end of the week, his agent said today.

"He is going to follow the guidelines established by the NFL," said Gary Kovach, who handles Taylor's contractual matters. "Hopefully in 30 days he will be back playing football, like Dexter Manley."

Lawrence is a hold of the Washington Redskins, returned to the team on Monday after completing a 30-day suspension for substance abuse.

Giants' Banks signs contract

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The suspension of Lawrence Taylor did not help fellow Pro Bowl linebacker Carl Banks finally reach a contract agreement with the New York Giants, Banks' agent says.

Banks ended a 43-day holdout and signed a four-year contract today.

The accord came less than 24 hours after the Giants learned that the NFL suspended Taylor for 30 days for a second violation of the league's drug policy.

Lawrence is a hold of a player and a hell of a guy," said Dr. Charles Tucker, Banks' agent. "We did not want to use that as a bargaining tool. Carl has great respect for Lawrence. We wanted Carl to be paid on his merit. If we wanted to use that we would have asked for another couple of hundred thousand dollars."

Boxers to receive hearing

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two St. Louis boxers who were disqualified from last month's Olympic trials after testing positive for cocaine will receive a hearing Wednesday before an arbitrator in St. Louis.

One of the two, 21-year-old William Guthrie, says he would box off later this week against Anthony Hembrick of the Army. The U.S. Olympic team's 146-pound representative, if his appeal is upheld, Lavell Finger, 20, the other St. Louis boxer who was disqualified, said he is not prepared to renew his Olympics bid.

Guthrie and Finger, who both lost in finals of the Olympic trials on July 10 in Concord, Calif., were to have boxed off July 16 at Las Vegas against Hembrick and 139-pound winner Todd Foster of Great Falls, Mont., as the most worthy opponents in the two classes.

Packers' Epps ends holdout

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers and veteran Phil Epps have reached contract agreement, ending the wide receiver's five-week holdout.

Epps was reportedly seeking $390,000 from the Packers, who were offering $350,000 for a one-year deal. The Packers added a $25,000 bonus to the package earlier this week, reports said.

Epps, in his seventh year from Texas Christian and one of the NFL's fastest runners, caught 34 passes for 516 yards and two touchdowns last season.

Police arrest 2 Vandal players

MOSCOW (AP) — Kord Smith and Marvin Washington, two expected starters for the University of Idaho football team, were arrested Sunday in Pullman, Wash., and accused of stealing a bicycle, school officials said.

In a prepared statement, football officials said, "We're very embarrassed about the whole situation but until all the facts are relayed to us, we don't know a great deal about it."

"It's an unfortunate incident that guys that old would continue to pull college pranks. As usually is the case, one or two people can make a group of 100 more good ones look bad which is the case."

"For our part, we will take care of any punishment that needs to be doled out. Anything else that needs to be done by the courts will be done by them. But it will never be a matter of public record just exactly what we do. It will be among the football team, these individuals and the coaching staff," the statement said.

Head Coach Keith Gilbertson said suspension was a possibility, but no decision has been made.

Summer's last hurrah

Sophisticated? Yes! But also fun and easy to plan with innovation and imagination

Grab a friend and head out for a gourmet day

A warm day, fresh air and a relaxing atmosphere provide the perfect setting for a picnic. This season, found picnics to be a little more sophisticated — but still fun and easy to plan. Now, with a little innovation and imagination, dining al fresco can be the ideal way to celebrate summer's end.

Festive make-ahead foods eliminate the hassle of grill and charcoal. With these easy to prepare recipes and a few added touches of your own, you can create an elegant outing. Don't forget woven baskets, fine china and sparkling wine glasses.

Apricot Ham Loaf Supreme and Confetti Rice Ring are two excellent recipes that are delicious served cold. Prepared and garnished at home, both dishes are easy to transport and serve. Assorted fresh vegetables with a creamy tarragon dipping sauce are the perfect complement.

Make your own Strawberry Wine Cooler by combining a sweetened mixture of pureed strawberries, thablis and lemon juice with club soda and ice. Substitute white grape juice for the wine to make a non-alcoholic version of this refreshing beverage.

For dessert, indulge in moist, rich Chocolate Almond Brownies, made with creamy sweetened condensed milk, cocoa, almonds, amaretto and chunks of white candy bars. These luscious brownie wedges even have a buttery crust. For ambitious picnickers, take turns cranking out delicious homemade Peach & Raspberry Ice Cream.

APRICOT HAM LOAF SUPREME

- 1 (16-ounce) jar apricot preserves (about 1½ cups)
- ¼ cup bottled lemon juice
- ¾ cup chopped slivered almonds
- ¾ cup chopped celery
- 3 tablespoons margarine or butter
- ¾ cup chopped dried apricots
- 1 pound lean ground ham
- 1 pound lean ground pork
- 1 cup fresh bread crumbs (2 slices bread)
- 2 eggs, beaten

In small bowl, combine preserves and lemon juice. In skillet, cook nuts and celery in margarine until celery is tender, stirring occasionally; remove from heat. Add apricots and ¼ cup preserves mixture. In large bowl, combine ham and pork; add bread crumbs, eggs and ½ cup preserves mixture. Mix well. Divide meat mixture into 2 equal portions. In 16- x 10-inch jellyroll pan, shape ½ portion meat into 14- x 4-inch loaf. Spoon nut mixture onto

Tasty potatoes in Idaho, of course

I always hear... "but we can't get Idaho potatoes here in Idaho, they're all shipped out of state."

Is that true? Really? Well, to answer that question and a thousand others dealing with our tubers, I attended an annual meeting of the potato industry this week at Sun Valley. It was the 60th such meeting of the IGSA (Idaho Growers and Shippers Association).

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

These are the Potato People. The people who have put Idaho, with its unique shape on the map, our most famous product on our license plates and the most delicious potato on plates all over the world.

Well, I found out you can get Idaho Potatoes in Idaho. But there's a catch — you're going to have to pay for them. There's a strange phenomenon in our state, because we are so known for those famous potatoes, a lot of consumers balk at paying the market rate for them.

If you do happen to purchase, or are given some honest to goodness Idaho Potatoes, here is a delicious late summer supper for four.

CREAMY SHRIMP AND POTATO (IDAHO, OF COURSE) SALAD

- 2 Idaho potatoes (8-ounces each), unpeeled, washed and cubed (3 cups)
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- ½ cup sour cream
- 3 tablespoons catsup
- 1 to 2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
- 1 pound shrimp, peeled, cleaned, cut in half lengthwise and cooked
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1 green pepper, cut into thin strips
- ¼ cup coarsely chopped red onion
- In a medium saucepan bring potatoes and 1-inch salted water to boil. Simmer 5 to 8 minutes or until tender, then drain.

Cool just slightly. Meanwhile, in a large bowl combine the mayonnaise, sour cream, catsup, horseradish, salt and hot pepper sauce until smooth. Add potatoes, shrimp, celery, green pepper and red onion and toss to coat well. Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours (overnight was great).

Contrary to some advertisements, let's not save a potato... eat em up! Enjoy!

Pack a healthy school lunch

The Baltimore Sun

If your child takes a sack lunch to school, here are some tips for getting him or her to eat a well-balanced lunch:

Very the kind of lunch you prepare. Youngsters can grow tired of sandwiches quickly, so occasionally offer a Thermos filled with pasta salad, stew or chili.

Use muffins, bagels, rice cakes and other kinds of bread for a pleasant break from white and whole wheat. Also, you may want to make an open-faced sandwich or a double-decker club for variety.

Give children cut-up fruit instead of a whole piece. It is easier and more appealing for children to eat fruits like apples and oranges this way.

During the warm weather, prepare cold sandwiches ahead of time and freeze them. Wrap them in foil before placing in the child's lunch box. They should be room temperature by the time your child is ready to eat lunch.

Wrap lettuce and tomatoes separately so sandwiches will not get soggy.

Try to get your child to eat vegetables by serving them with a dip like yogurt or cottage cheese.

Cream cheese, margarine and even low-calorie salad dressings can be used as alternatives to mayonnaise in sandwiches.

If your child does not like milk, try offering cheese or yogurt.

Add sizzle to a cookout — and still diet!

By TONY KEMPTON
The Los Angeles Times

Traditional outdoor barbecues, with foods like sugary-sweet barbecue sauces, fatty beef and pork cuts and cholesterol-rich salads on the menu, can be devastating to diets.

It is, however, possible to add a little sizzle to a cookout menu and still stay within reasonable limits for sodium, fat and cholesterol intake, according to a registered dietitian at Centinela Hospital Medical Center in Inglewood, Calif.

"The goal," said Mary Crichton, "is to reduce total consumption of fat, and specifically cholesterol and saturated fat and have a healthy — not a heavy — summer barbecue."

Typical picnic and barbecue fare is often loaded with saturated fat, cholesterol, sugar or sodium, said Crichton, who cited hot dogs, hamburgers, ribs, potato salad, potato chips and ice cream as some of the worst offenders.

Current recommendations are that only 30 percent of any day's total calories be derived from fat (with 10 percent coming from saturated sources), that cholesterol be limited to 300 milligrams and sodium be kept between 1,000 and 3,000 milligrams.

"Beef hot dogs alone can derive as much as 50 percent of their calories from fat," Crichton reports. "A cheeseburger, potato salad, corn-on-the-cob with butter and salt, baked beans and ice cream contains 1,380 calories; 41 percent of them from fat."

Instead, she advises the health-minded to cut back on foods that will not be given up totally and to substitute more healthful ingredients whenever possible. Here are suggestions from Crichton to accomplish this goal:

— Go easy on the barbecue sauce, which is often high in sugar and sodium and experiment with spices such as garlic, oregano, curry, fresh lemon and lime juice instead.

— Use light mayonnaise or half mayonnaise and half plain yogurt to make potato salad.

— Try skinned chicken, turkey or fish on the grill. But spray the grates with non-stick vegetable coating since these foods have little or no fat and are more difficult to remove.

— Always select extra lean varieties of beef.

— Eat raw vegetables and low-fat dip instead of potato chips, which are high in fat and sodium.

— Wrap potatoes in foil and bake on the grill. Eat plain for a non-fat side dish, or lightly top with low-sodium, non-fat milk cheese like ricotta for added flavor.

— Select from summer's abundant fresh fruits instead of ice cream for dessert.

— Drink fruit juices and water instead of soft drinks, which contain sugar and caffeine. But read labels on sparkling water, since many are sweetened with sucrose or high-fructose corn syrup.

THAI TURKEY KEBABS

- 1½ pounds turkey breast fillets or turkey tenderloins
- 1 cup white wine
- ½ cup low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon finely minced ginger root
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- Peanut Sauce

Cut turkey into 1-inch cubes. Combine wine, soy sauce, ginger and garlic and pour over turkey. Marinate 2 hours in refrigerator. Remove turkey from marinade and reserve ½ cup for use in Peanut Sauce.

Thread turkey on skewers and brush with half of Peanut Sauce. Grill over medium coals 10 to 15 minutes until done, turning frequently.

Meanwhile, heat remaining sauce thoroughly, thinning with additional wine if necessary and serve with turkey kebabs. Makes 6 servings.

Weiners find that 2 in the kitchen is best

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Pauline and Wayne Weiner both bring home the bacon — and together they cook it.

The one who arrives home first begins dinner, Pauline says. "If I get home first, I start it, and then he just joins in."

There is usually a lot of cutting and chopping to do, because they stir-fry quite often. She says these dishes are light, but good, and help them to cut down on fats.

Another advantage of stir-frying is once all the preparatory chopping is done, it cooks in a hurry.

Pauline prepares a lot of things in the morning before leaving for work. She makes salads, cuts up meat and puts it in a marinade — anything she can do ahead.

They also often barbecue in the backyard, which saves a mess in the kitchen.

In order to have more time for fun and relaxation at day's end, the Weiners have gotten away from being what she calls "overly involved with preparing food."

Pauline says they still do a lot of cooking from scratch, because she doesn't like to use mixes. "But basically I prefer to make it fast, and go for a bike ride or something, rather than stay here and chop all day," she says.

The following are a few of their favorite recipes.

STIR FRIED CHICKEN WITH PEANUTS

- ½ cup orange juice
- ¼ cup water
- 2 tablespoons sherry
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce (She prefers the light, low sodium kind)
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon smooth peanut butter

- ¼-½ teaspoon dried, crushed hot peppers
- 6 chicken breasts, halved, with skin and bone removed

- 2 cups fresh snow peas, or 10-ounces frozen peas
- ¼ cup peanut oil or vegetable oil
- 4 green onions, cut diagonally into ½-inch pieces
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 3 zucchini, about 1 pound, cut into julienne strips

- 1 cup unsalted dry roasted peanuts
- Combine the first seven ingredients in a bowl. Stir well, and set aside. Cut chicken breasts into 1-inch pieces. Set aside. Wash snow peas, trim ends, remove strings. Set aside. Preheat wok or large skillet, with 2 tablespoons of oil, to 325 degrees on medium high heat.

- Add chicken and stir-fry until lightly browned. Remove chicken and set aside. Add remaining 2 tablespoons of oil to wok. Stir in snow peas, green onions, garlic, and stir fry two to three minutes. Remove vegetables. Stir in the soy sauce mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Boil about one minute. Add chicken, vegetables, zucchini and peanuts to wok, and stir fry for another two to three minutes, until it's heated through. Serve with Lemon Fried Rice. The recipe follows:

LEMON FRIED RICE

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 green onion with top, minced
- 2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 3 cups cooked brown rice
- Preheat wok to about 325 degrees (or high). Add green onions and stir-fry for 30 seconds. Stir in parsley and next three ingredients. Add rice and stir-fry two minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste.

When the cabbage is in full production out in her garden, Weiner often prepares...

CABBAGE STREUDEL

- Serves 6 to 7
- 2½ cups sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 egg
- 6 tablespoons salad oil
- ¾ cup ice water
- ½ cup butter or chicken fat
- 6 cups grated cabbage
- 1 onion, chopped
- ¼ teaspoon ground pepper
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- Sift the flour, baking powder and ½ teaspoon of the salt into a bowl. Make a well in the center. Place the egg, 4 tablespoons of salad oil and the ice water in it. Work into the flour until the dough is formed. If it is too soft, add a little more flour. Knead until smooth and elastic. Cover the dough in warm bowl.

To prepare the filling, first melt the shortening in a skillet. Add cabbage, onion, pepper, sugar and the remaining salt. Sauté for 20 minutes, stirring. Let cool for 20 minutes. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Roll out the dough as thin as possible.
Spread cabbage mixture on, and roll it up in jelly roll fashion. Place on a greased shallow baking pan. Brush with remaining salad oil, and bake for 45 minutes, until crisp. Slice while still hot.

These turn out to be about 4-inches-across and one-inch-thick. To make hors d'oeuvres, the circumference may be cut down.

Beat eggs, oil and milk together in a bowl. Add flour and beat until very smooth. Chill for 30 minutes. It should be the consistency of heavy cream. Add more milk, if necessary. In a 6- or 7-inch skillet, melt a small amount of butter.

Put in 1 tablespoon of the batter, and roll it around in the pan, until it covers it. Brown only on one side, and cook until dry on top. Do not turn them over. Stack them as they are

ICED MEXICAN AVOCADO SOUP

1 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 small onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
4 cups low-sodium chicken broth or homemade stock
1 large avocado, halved and pitted
1 cup low-sodium tomato sauce or tomato juice
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
Salt, pepper

cooked. Put a teaspoon of filling in each, on the cooked side, and fold up like a burrito or an envelope, and brown on all sides in butter or margarine. Serve with sour cream, jelly or jam on top.

Filling:

2 pounds cottage cheese
1 small package (3-ounces) cream cheese
1 egg
1 tablespoon sugar
A dash of salt
A dash of cinnamon
Combine in a food processor or blender. It should be smooth.
For a meat filling:
2 cups meat (leftovers or hamburger)
2 stalks celery, chopped
1 onion, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 egg
1 cup cooked rice (optional)
Cook the hamburger, drain fat, and add the vegetables, egg and rice. Cook until egg sets. When using already cooked meat, add the other ingredients, and cook until egg sets.
Turkey cooking has become Wayne's exclusive territory, ever since he began fixing it in his converted refrigerator smoker. This provides a dual advantage — the turkey tastes great this way, and it frees the kitchen oven for other things.

SMOKED TURKEY

For this, he says the smaller the bird, the better, but he has gone as high as a 23-24-pound turkey with excellent results.

Brine:
4 cups water

1/4 cup non-fat milk

cucumber, peeled and cubed
Melt butter in saucepan. Add onion and garlic and sauté until tender. Add broth and simmer 10 minutes. Scoop avocado into blender. Pour in onion-broth mixture, tomato sauce and cumin. Blend until smooth, adding in 2 batches if necessary. Season to taste with salt and pepper, cover and chill. Stir in milk before serving and garnish with cucumber. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

1 1/2 cup curing salt (the generally uses only 1/4 cup, unless it's to be kept for a long period of time)

1/2 cup brown sugar
3 cups sweet apple cider
1/2 teaspoon ginger
2-4 tablespoons black pepper
2-4 cup lemon juice

1/2-ounce maple flavoring
Mix ingredients together in a non-aluminum container. Submerge the bird for approximately 24 hours (refrigerated). Then remove it, to allow turkey to dry. Pat it with a paper towel to bring it to room temperature. Rub it with brown sugar. Preheat smoker to 200-225 degrees. He uses meat hooks.

Otherwise, tie string to legs, and run it up through the cavity and out the neck hole, and tie it to the rod on top of the smoker. He has a shelf with a pan, to catch the drippings. Smoke the turkey for approximately one hour per pound. To test for doneness, move a leg — if it moves freely in the joint, it is done.

He says if you are going to use the bird for something to brag about — when it is done, and while it is still warm — rub it with butter, to make it glossy.

Any of the ingredients can be added or removed depending on taste.

If the turkey is to be eaten right away, it's not necessary to use the salt.

Wayne says he has kept the turkey in this brine for up to two days. It gives the bird a little more flavor, but it will reach a point where it will not take on any more.

"The turkey was created for smoking," Wayne says. "To me, anymore, it's the only way it's fit to eat."

Quality of bulbs best now

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

September and October are the best months for planting new flower bulbs which will bloom next spring. This is also a good time to move bulbs from one place to another in your garden.

Many stores will soon have a good selection of spring blooming bulbs. Nurseries and garden stores generally have the largest size bulbs which give the largest

Therefore the section is best if you buy early. Bulbs also tend to dry out on warm store shelves. By buying early you get the best quality. You can store them in your refrigerator and keep them in good condition if you can't plant right away.

Tulips and daffodils are the most popular spring blooming bulbs. They come in the widest range of types and sizes. They are also the most reliable in performance. If you would like something different, try double or parrot tulips or multi-cup daffodils (generally referred to as narcissus).

Crocus are very early blooming although quite short. Hyacinths are one of the most fragrant flowers which can be grown. There are a number of other minor bulbs which can extend the blooming season and add variety to the spring flower garden.

The landscape effect of bulbs is generally better if planted in groups or clusters rather than single file rows. If you plant two or more kinds together, be sure to check their blooming heights. Single colors are usually more striking than mixtures.

Good written instructions on planting depths are generally available on the package or as a separate leaflet wherever bulbs are sold. A good general rule is to plant them about three times the bulb diameter.

Although it is true that good quality bulbs will bloom the first time without any fertilizer, it does require fertilizer to produce the best quality bulb for the next season's bloom. Fertilizer can be applied at the time of planting or early next spring.

I prefer to fertilize at planting time. Recent research at the Dutch Flower Bulb Institute has shown that bulbs need more nitrogen than previously recommended. A formula such as 9-6-3 or 10-6-4 is ideal. Most general purpose fertilizers such as 10-10-10 or 15-15-15 are also quite satisfactory. Bone meal is often recommended as a bulb fertilizer in humid or rainy climates. It is not recommended for our alkaline soil types because it tends to make our soils even more alkaline.

The addition of organic amendments such as bark dust or peat moss will also improve bulb growth. Amendments should be mixed thoroughly by tilling or double spading before planting.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in Food/Home.

From downright ugly to acceptable

Modular homes become phenomenon

Newsday

The original modular home, ground out by the gross-on-factory assembly-lines, was like the original Japanese car: small, basic, a little odd-looking and known for its cheap price tag.

But just as the Japanese have spiced up their cars and their profits, so have the makers of modulars. In large part, this phenomenon has been made possible by technical innovations that allow more design flexibility. In fact, the boxy, trailer-like look that characterized the original modulars has given way to two-story colonials, contemporary beach-style houses and traditional capes.

"Today, the factories can do almost anything a builder can," says Tony Laurino of Wedgefield Homes in Port Jefferson Station, N.Y. "We can offer them skylights, Jacuzzi's, ceramic tile. It is not a trailer any more, it is a real house." His company sells homes built by Peter Lyon of Selinsgrove, Pa. Says Cathy Barham of Ryland Homes, of Columbia, Md.: "We have started to build homes that are characterized as move-up homes, not just for first-time buyers; we have some modulars that retail at $375,000."

As modulars have matched site-built homes in size, quality, and design, their price has naturally increased. To some extent, this reflects the cost of providing additional amenities and more stylish designs. Increasingly, says Tom Melley of Quality Crafted Homes of Manorsville,

N.Y., homeowners are willing to trade some of their savings for higher quality. The one advantage over building from scratch—that will never change, says Melley, is that "...I can always build it faster."

But for some dealers, according to several factory officials, the new prices are simply what the traffic will bear for homes that have become indistinguishable from mid-priced custom homes. The dealers still have a tremendous cost advantage over custom builders, said one factory owner, "even if they don't always pass it on to the buyer."

In achieving respectability over the last few years, modulars have gone through a few design stages, from downright ugly to acceptable, to anything goes. This has been achieved by factory engineers, architects are still the exception, not the rule, who have overcome some inherent limitations. The design problem is this: The individual building blocks of these homes must be shipped by truck to the construction sites. Thus, to fit on trailers that fit on the highways, the pieces can be no greater than 60 feet long, by 14 feet wide, by 13 feet high. The typical low-cost ranch is comprised of two of these long boxes, joined down the middle. Absent special reinforcing, this means rooms can be no more than 14 feet wide in one direction.

Height restrictions posed by highway overpasses particularly affect design. Roofs on some of the original modulars had to be nearly flat, with a pitch of only three feet for every 12 feet of width, a proportion that looked odd, to say the least.

An early esthetic innovation, which came into widespread use about three years ago, was the partially hinged roof. The center section of these roofs was folded down for transport, then lifted up again by crane at the job site.

This system creates a steeper pitch of five feet of height for every 12 feet of width, which is typical of the normal-looking ranch house. L-shaped ranches are created by joining four of the basic building blocks, with this type of roofing; at right angles to each other.

But still, these roofs were not big enough for an attic or upstairs bedrooms and, stylistically, could not duplicate sharply pitched roofs of traditional capes and some popular contemporary designs.

To overcome the roof problem, more recently, manufacturers have been shipping more cleverly hinged designs that unfold like Swiss Army knives to match traditional Cape Cod styles, with pitches of 10 feet or more for every 12 of width. Besides looking better, this can create raw space upstairs amounting to one third to one half of the floor area of the downstairs, for finishing or expansion later. "It gets rid of the stigma of the boxy ranch house," says Benny Orlovski of E-Z Homes in Catehogue, N.Y., a dealer for Contempro Homes in Taylor, Pa.

For traditionalists, Cape Cod roofing systems are sometimes shipped with components for gable style dormers which are, in turn, assembled on site. Others, for extra space upstairs...employ shed-type dormers. These roofing systems all have a price: more work on site, which tend to lessen the cost advantage of the modular builder.

The most unusual new approach to roofing comes from Stratton Homes in Stratton, Pa., which offers a so-called "reverse roof system." Unlike previous designs, this one orients the pitch of the roof along the long side of the house module. "You can get away from the boxy look to a greater degree, and you're free of the limitations of the conventionally sized boxes," says Marie Lewis of Stratton.

Interior rooms can be much larger using this system, and there is almost no limitation to the size of the house. But again, more site work, and high costs, are involved.

In general, most modular homes are built on spec, for resale by the builder, or as so-called turnkey operations, in which the builder provides house, foundation, finish details, and of course, the paperwork and the all-important certificate of occupancy.

Laurino is experimenting with a new low-cost option for the first-time home buyer: Direct purchase of just the house, or of an unfinished house on a foundation. "Many people have the skills to file for permits and complete some of the work themselves," he says. "This enables them to save substantially." Buyers have the option of providing their own foundation, or of having Laurino handle it for a price.

Article on pesticides differs with opinion

Los Angeles Times

A cautious view of America's pesticide problem recently appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The article is noteworthy because it is at odds with prevailing opinions held by numerous consumer groups and members of Congress that agricultural chemicals pose a serious threat to public health.

The article found that only two of the pesticides currently in use actually cause cancer in humans. Other agricultural compounds previously implicated as health hazards have only been proven to be cancer agents in laboratory animals. And the report goes on to state that these types of animal tests are not reliably predictive of human cancers.

Keeping pets out of bed not too much to ask in marriage

DEAR ABBY: Peter and I have been married for less than one year, and I am now faced with a problem that is threatening to break up our marriage. We are not kids. I am 45 and Peter is 47. He absolutely will not allow any of our pets in bed with us. (We have a dog and two cats.) Peter is extremely fastidious and says it's a matter of "cleanliness."

Abby, our pets are well-groomed and they are just as

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

clean as people. I had these pets before I married him, and they were always permitted on my bed, so now they are confused and hurt when they are not allowed on my bed.

Is there a solution? Am I wrong to argue this point? I love my husband, but I think he's being unreasonable. Please help me. My pets are so angry, they won't even look at me.

—ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR ANIMAL LOVER: I hope you love your husband more than your pets because you may be forced to make a choice. Although some animals are cleaner than people, a man not accustomed to having pets in his bed is not likely to change. Your pets are understandably confused to find that a part of their domain is suddenly "off limits."

However, the word from here is: Retrain your pets. They may resist at first, but it can be done.

DEAR ABBY: Recent studies have shown that there is a dramatic decrease in automobile accidents when people drive with their lights on in the daytime.

Drivers have been a little slow to pick up on this. We have just returned from Canada, where we noticed that about 75 percent of the drivers were driving with their lights on during the day.

When I asked my Canadian nephew about this, he said Canada has just passed a law that will require headlights to be turned on when you start your car!

—LARRY WILSON,
BARTLESVILLE, OKLA.

DEAR LARRY: Many others wrote to stress the safety advantage of daytime driving with the lights on. It is the law in Sweden and Denmark. Thankfully, we are beginning to see the light.

DEAR ABBY: I was very much interested in your advice. "Do not transfer medicine from its original container to another." I have to, with Anacin.

In their effort to make the bottle child-proof, the makers of Anacin made it "elderly-proof," too. I am in my 80s, and with my arthritic fingers and poor eyesight, I find it very hard to line up the arrows and pry off the lid.

Please let the Anacin people know this. Their product is very good — once you get to it.

—FRUSTRATED RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Have you ever told your pharmacist that the child-proof lid on the Anacin bottle is giving you an Excedrin headache? If not, please do, and you will be provided with the easy-to-open kind.

Meridian (King Hill).
On July 1, 1988 the Water Resources Board adopted a resolution designating this river portion as an interim protected river. This resolution, in accordance with Idaho Code Section 42-1734(5), prohibits any dredging, mining and alterations of the streambeds on the river. The protected river status was intended to protect the river from future interim protection. The river status may last as long as the State of Idaho's Water Resources Board adopts a comprehensive state water plan, or until such time that the status is revoked by law.

The action of the State Board of Land Commissioners provides that the riverbed(s) be withdrawn from general entry for such time as the river(s) has interim or other river status under the rivers bill.
